House and Senate To Hear Premier MacDonald Make Brief Address in Capitol

Daughter and Sir Esme Howard To Accompany Visitor to Legislative Halls.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, October 6.—Prime Minister MacDonald will return to the atmosphere of legislative halls, so familiar to him, with a visit to the United States capital at noon tomorrow, where he is expected to speak briefly to members of each house.

The senate will interrupt the highly controversial tariff debate to pay honor to the distinguished guest, while a special session of the house, which now has no business before it, will be held for him. Speaker Longworth, of the house, is returning especially from his home in Cincinnati for this occasion.

As on similar occasions, members will be given an opportunity to file by and shake hands with the British prime minister. His daughter, Miss Ebbot, will occupy a seat in the diplomatic gallery, accompanied by Lady Isabella Howard, wife of the British ambassador.

This visit to the capital will be the first function tomorrow after the prime minister's return from President Hoover's Rapidan camp. MacDonald and his daughter will have lunch at the White House. Only immediate members of the party and the British ambassador and his wife will be present.

This small luncheon party will contrast with the elaborate state dinner at the White House tomorrow night, for which 90 covers have been laid. This state dinner is the largest affair of its kind ever given. The guest list, as usual, will not be made public until just before the dinner.

Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister and official hostess of Vice President Curtis, will be among those present. The social controversy that was feared when she announced her return to the capital a few days ago has been averted, however. Vice President Curtis waived any claims of precedence for her at this dinner, and she will sit below Lady Isabella Howard.

It is not expected that Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, wife of the speaker, who disputed Mrs. Gann's social claims, will be present. She is at her home in Cincinnati and will not return here with the speaker, it is understood.

LOCAL AERONAUTIC CHAPTER TO ELECT NEW HEADS TODAY

The annual meeting of the Atlanta chapter of the National Aeronautic Association, at which officers and directors for the ensuing year will be elected, will be held at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon at Hall No. 2 of the Chamber of Commerce.

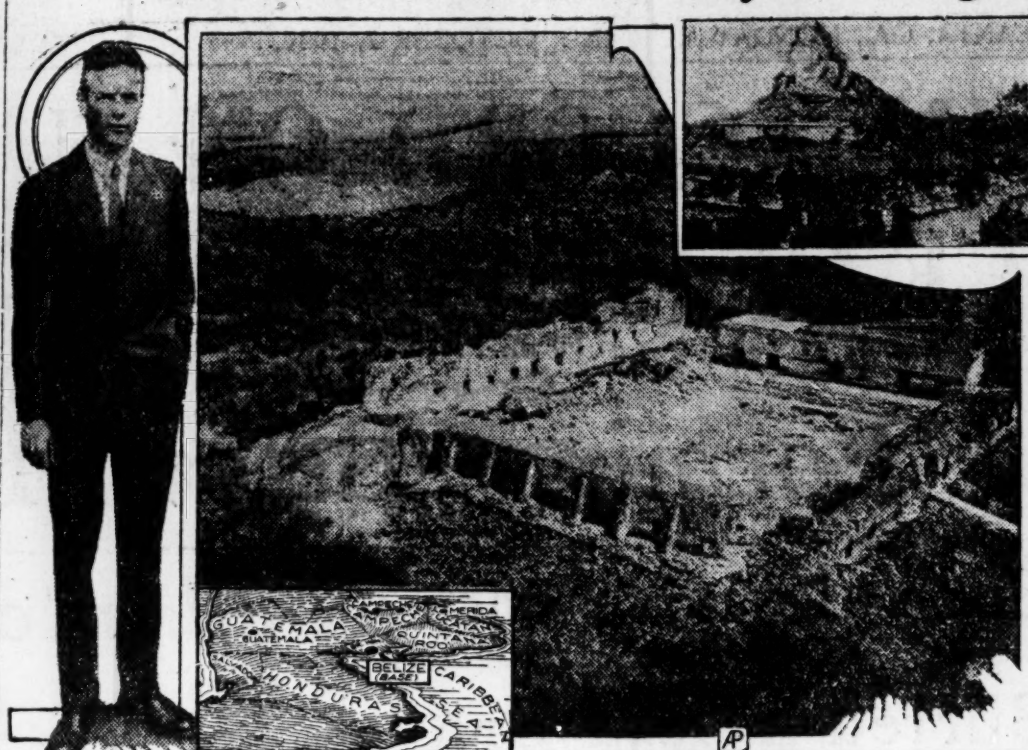

In addition to the business of selecting new leaders for the year, plans and preparations for the entertainment of pilots on the Ford reliability tour will be discussed. A full attendance is asked by Secretary William A. Dunlap.

Reservations for the luncheon may be made by calling Walnut 2337 or Walnut 5049.

Lindbergh Begins Perilous Flight Over Treacherous Mayan Jungles

Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh's voyage of aerial archeology, which began Sunday, will take him over such ruins as "The Caracol" at Chichen-itza, Yucatan (upper right), believed to have been an ancient astronomical observatory, and the Temple of the Priests at Uxmal, Yucatan (center), which reveals the wild surrounding terrain. The map shows the course Lindbergh will cover.

Miami, Fla., October 6.—(AP)—The first flight of the Carnegie Institute-Pan American Airways exploration expedition, on which Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh will pilot Dr. Alfred Kidder and Dr. Oliver Peterson, of the archaeological department of the scientific organization on air hunts for ruins of legendary Mayan cities, as well as on inspections of the Mayan ruins already discovered by white men, ended today at 3:45 p. m., when the flying colonel landed his Sikorsky amphibian plane at Merida, Yucatan, after a flight from Belize, British Honduras, according to radio dispatches to M. J. Rice, Miami traffic manager for the airline.

Colonel Lindbergh, accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh, a co-pilot and radio operator, in addition to the two Carnegie Institute scientists, hopped off from Belize at 10:15 a. m., making the flight to Merida in 512 hours. A portion of the unexplored area of the ancient Maya civilization was traversed by the plane.

Three to Five-Day Trip.

Three to five days will be passed by the exploration party in air trips over Yucatan, Quintana, Rio and Chiapas, Mexico, Guatemala and British Honduras. Cozumel island, off the east coast of the Yucatan peninsula, site of various of the known Mayan ruins, may be the base for the explorations.

A civilization little known to the average man, but credited by many experts with being the greatest in the world during the dark ages, when European culture languished and almost died, existed in the area which is being explored. The Mayan civilization far surpassed the Aztec and Inca civilizations in arts such as painting, sculpture and architecture. Little is known to science of the way in which the Mayan civilization decayed and died. The dangers of the Central American jungles have prevented white men from penetrating far inland from the Atlantic coast in search of scientific data concerning the lesser known ruins of ancient Mayan cities.

Colonel Lindbergh hopes by his explorations to enable the scientists to obtain additional information which would require years to garner in any other manner.

Details Today.

William I. Van Dusen, Pan-American Airways publicity writer, who also is on the tour, radioed to Mr. Rice at 10:40 a. m. today the following message:

"Lindbergh took off Belize 10:15 a. m., eastern standard time. Mrs. Lindbergh in party. Bong taxi on quiet water. Cloudy but indications of breaking up."

A radio message to Mr. Rice after the landing at Merida, Yucatan, follows:

"Working reports, plans, weather, etc. Detailed report tomorrow."

FIRE PREVENTION CLEAN-UP DRIVE URGED BY CODY

A clean-up of Atlanta Sunday was advocated by Fire Chief W. B. Cody in commenting on the national observance of "Fire Prevention Week," which begins today.

"Regular cleaning, particularly in attics, cellars and under stairways would prevent numerous fires which are constantly destroying American homes," Cody said.

"A large percentage of fires," Cody added, "are preventable through proper disposal of rubbish. It is every citizen's duty to see that all refuse and waste material is collected and destroyed."

Mrs. Hoover, Miss M'Donald FIRST LADY AND HER GUEST TRAMP HILL COUNTRY Become Fast Friends on Hike

BY MARGUERITE YOUNG, Associated Press Staff Writer.

Madison, Va., October 6.—Isabel MacDonald and Mrs. Herbert Hoover today made friends in the way any two women will when they are free to talk about common interests alone together in an atmosphere they both enjoy.

Khal-el-lad, they rode horseback and walked secluded on the mountain heights of the president's Camp Rapidan, turning in conversation from bettering the question of the world's youth to the magic beauty of early fall outdoors.

They rested tonight in separate cabins high on the edge of the Shenandoah National park, the daughter of the prime minister of Great Britain occupying a two-room cabin alone. Within a stone's throw, on one side, the first lady of the United States retired in the president's lodge. On the other side of Miss MacDonald's cabin her father slept in another two-room cottage.

Rising early, Miss MacDonald went to the main dining hall of the camp to breakfast with Mrs. Hoover. They lingered over the meal after the men of the party had started for a walk and inspection tour of the rugged trails back of the camp at the suggestion of the hostess.

Later they took a horseback ride of more than two hours' duration over the rugged trails back of the camp, returning just in time for a brief rest before luncheon. Refrained from formalities, the two women talked almost continuously as they rode among the vast stretches of forest land made more beautiful by the changing season.

In the afternoon, disclaiming any fatigue after their ride, the two women set off on a hike in the opposite direction from their morning trip.

Conversation turned to things impersonal but very close to the hearts of both. Some one had mentioned the mountain children of the vicinity, and this was the beginning of a discussion of the needs of youth throughout the world. The talk broadened to include many things both women would do on behalf of others.

most entirely with cruiser strength. The virtual agreement was reached to apply the Hoover "yardstick" to measure fighting strength.

Under it, the British would have a gross cruiser tonnage of 339,000, and the United States 285,000 to 300,000. The only remaining point of difference deals with how 30,000 tons of cruisers shall be distributed by the United States, whether in three 10,000-ton cruisers with 8-inch guns or in four 7,500-ton cruisers with 6-inch guns.

Under the "yardstick," the fighting strength of the two fleets would be theoretically equivalent. This takes into consideration the age, speed, arms and armaments of individual ships.

To meet the widely differing needs of the two nations, Great Britain would have a preponderance of small cruisers while America would have an advantage in larger ships of this class.

Details of the agreement which have not yet been worked out, were left to the general conference, which must approve the Anglo-American understanding before it can become effective.

France, Italy and Japan have been kept advised of the trend of the negotiations.

The conference lasted for a considerable time and after it the party, with Mr. Hoover acting as guide, went up a hill in the opposite direction from the morning trip for a view of the surrounding country from the mountain top. The walk both from the lodge and return was made slowly in order that none of the party, most of whom are not accustomed to the ruggedness of the mountainside, would tire during the trip.

Upon inspecting the camp today, the prime minister manifested particular interest in the luxury of its appointments and the facilities so unexpected in the fastness of the mountain wilderness. The prime minister stayed in one guest lodge, his daughter, Isabel, in another, the secretary of state staying in still a third.

The stay at the camp will be virtually the only recreation in the American countryside which the prime minister will enjoy during his trip to the United States, his other time being spent either in traveling or in keeping engagements which have already been made.

The start for return to Washington will be made from the camp at 7:30 a. m. after an early breakfast, the party arriving in the capital in mid-morning.

Most important in the prime minister's program for Monday is the state dinner to be given in his honor at the White House by President and Mrs. Hoover. The dinner to which the highest officials of the government and the most prominent persons in the congressional circles have been invited will be in the nature of the social climax for the premier's visit to this country.

The prime minister's other engagements include a trip to congress, where he will visit both the house and the senate.

Man and Woman Freed on Bonds In Kidnap Case

M. A. Steele, head of a magazine subscription agency which employs girls as saleswomen, and Miss Ruth Sellers, his associate in business, Sunday were at liberty after they had furnished bonds of $300 and $200 respectively, after being bound over to the Fulton county grand jury by Recorder A. W. Callaway on charges of kidnaping.

The charges were preferred by Mrs. J. C. Davis, head of the Atlanta woman's bureau, who alleged Steele and Miss Sellers detained Allene Wood, 14-year-old girl, of 1388 Gault street, who disappeared from her home and was found Friday in a hotel room occupied by Miss Sellers.

Steele testified that the girl had come to him in reply to an advertisement offering opportunities to several young Atlanta women. He said that his business leads him to all parts of the south and that he and Miss Sellers needed help in Atlanta.

Steele stated that the Wood girl came to him seeking for employment and that she told him she was 18 years old and an orphan. The girl said that her father and mother were killed in an explosion at Tampa, Fla., Steele testified.

Steele employed her, he said, and sent her to Miss Sellers for instructions. Miss Wood corroborated Steele's testimony, saying that she had noticed Steele into employing her and that he had made no attempt to take her against her wishes. However, Judge Callaway held that the advertising method used by Steele in inducing girls to seek employment from him constituted kidnaping and held the pair for the higher court.

"I have no idea what caused me to try such a thing as robbery," she sobbed. "I must have had a brain storm. All I want is a chance to begin again with a clean slate."

Miss La Coste related that she had begun driving her father's car when she was 12 and became a race driver when she was 17, achieving her greatest success in 1926 when, she said, she drove her car 145 miles an hour at Daytona Beach, Fla.

Miss La Coste will be arraigned in felony court tomorrow on a charge of assault and attempted robbery.

Fair Weather Due for Today, Forecast Says

Canon City Prison Guards Suspected of Aiding Convicts In Deadly Prison Rebellion

Two inmates of State Institution are held in solitary as investigation goes on.

Canon City, Col., October 6.—(AP)—Two convicts were held in solitary confinement as instigators of the bloody riot at the state penitentiary here last week which resulted in the death of 12 men, seven of them prison guards and five prisoners, as authorities endeavored to get conditions back to normal. The rebellion all but demolished the penal institution.

A. H. Davis and Leo W. McGentry are held in solitary confinement. Prison, local and state officials have promised that any man found guilty of conspiracy to aid in the riot will hang.

Three men are suspected. Davis and McGentry are two who have come under official scrutiny as possible surviving ringleaders in the conspiracy. The officials also are investigating the possibility that certain prison guards may have been involved.

Warren F. Crawford refused to accuse any guard of having been implicated in the conspiracy. The warden, however, did not deny that the fatal rioters might have been smuggled in by guards who were friendly to the prisoners.

"No one is under official suspicion at this time," he said, "but we are investigating every possible angle of the riot and its terrible conclusion."

"As far as we can determine from prisoners and guards the chief ringleaders in the riot are dead—the results of their efforts to secure freedom."

"We are exerting every effort to discover the identities of any other individuals, be they convicts or be they guards, who have had any part of the insurrection."

"If it is found that anyone outside of the convicts themselves aided or abetted the plans for, or the riot itself, they will be prosecuted without mercy."

A coroner's inquest into the riot deaths will be held Monday. On Tuesday the state board of charities and corrections will meet at the penitentiary in an effort to determine any culpability on the part of prison inmates or guards.

COOKING SCHOOL TO BE CONDUCTED AT FAIR BUILDING

A modern cooking school, under the supervision of Mrs. S. R. Dull, internationally-known cooking expert, will be conducted twice daily at the South-eastern Fair. The first school will be held from 10:30 to 12 o'clock this morning and another will be held from 3 to 4:30 o'clock during the afternoon. This program will be carried out each day of the fair.

In the demonstrations, nothing but Georgia products, except baking powders, will be used, it was said. The all-Georgia school will be free to patrons of the fair during the week. It will be located in the left rear portion of the Liberal Arts building.

Mrs. Dull has conducted cooking schools for 15 years and has held demonstrations in practically every state in the east, south and middle west. She recently returned to the city from demonstrations in Delaware and North Carolina.

This is the first time in the history of the fair association that a cooking school and demonstration have been carried on.

Roosevelt, of New York; Governor Bibb Graves, of Alabama, and Governor O. Max Gardner, of North Carolina, all of whom have set aside other engagements and agreed to come here to Lakewood park to manifest their interest and enthusiasm in the outstanding event of the entire southeast for the upbuilding of agriculture, live stock and industry in this territory.

GAR 'ROBBER BARONS' GET LOOT, GOOD TIME

Owner and Patrons of Road House Play Host to Bandits.

Chicago, October 6.—(United News).—Six jolly "robber barons," who believe in having a good time while collecting, made one of their bi-monthly visits early today to the Palm Gardens roadhouse, near the Indiana-Illinois state line, took possession of the place for two hours and left with an estimated $10,000 in cash and jewels.

Bowing to the right and left, as if they might have been vaudeville artists, in to the roadhouse came the "bad men" made their appearance at 3 a. m. The band, piece by piece, dismissed. The owner, Bill Fiddles, failed to return the smiling hand salute of the leader, but stepped over promptly and opened the cash register. It being the fifth visit of the robbers in three months, Fiddles had learned by now what he was supposed to do. Many other roadhouses in the vicinity pay tribute to avoid such interruptions.

Couples Lined Up to Wall. Couples lined up to wall against the wall. Others of the 60 patrons, who included many pretty and young girls, were told to lay their heads in the palms on the tables.

One by one, the barons "frisked" the men and women. The loot was piled into a bag. About $800 from the cash drawer, $1,500 from the patrons, and jewelry valued at $7,500 was reported taken.

Come now," coaxed one of the leaders, "smile, you fellows, this ain't no funeral. Heh! You—" motioning to the orchestra, "play us 'Lover, Come Home'."

The music and a drink so pleased the leader he ordered the bartender to set 'em up for the orchestra. Another piece or two, the while the bartender was conducting the orchestra for the patrons, and the crowd joined with the bandits in the singing.

Picking out some of the better looking young ladies, two of the bandits took a whirl at dancing. The girl proved amiable, she got her jewelry back.

Decide on Beauty Contest. Cigars and cigarettes next were passed out.

"We want you fellows to get your money's worth," one bandit explained. Then the robbers decided to have a beauty contest. The girls, many of them tripping coquettishly by in review, made some wicked eyes at the judges. A "smile little" was declared winner and given $25.

"Now, ain't we good fellows?" asked the robber leader, as he and his companions backed out. "How about a cheer for us?"

And the crowd still was cheering 10 minutes later when police arrived.

SHOWS ON MIDWAY AT LAKEWOOD FAIR OPEN THIS MORNING

A special train of 25 all-steel cars, bearing the Royal American Shows, which will be on the midway at Lakewood during the Southeastern Fair this week, arrived in Atlanta shortly after midnight Sunday. A cavalcade of workmen began immediately unloading the cars and placing the shows and rides in their respective places on the fairgrounds.

After a few minor adjustments are made on the machinery that pulls the rides, the shows will be ready for the public within a few hours after the gates are opened this morning.

There will be 18 shows and 12 rides in the equipment of the Royal American Shows. The equipment is said to be the latest type.

During the remainder of the week, the shows open at 10 o'clock and remain in operation until midnight.

TWO MEN BURNED AS AUTOMOBILE FLAMES AT MACON

Macon, Ga., October 6.—(AP)—Oris Hancock, manager of a filling station, and Jim Grier, negro customer, were badly burned late today when fire engulfed a pump as Grier's car was being filled with gasoline.

Hancock drove into the filling station, cut off the engine and asked for gas. The hose was inserted in the car's tank and the gas turned on. At that instant the flames flared up, enveloping both men, the pump and the car.

Pedestrians ran, fearing an explosion. A white woman, however, threw her coat around the negro, smothered the flames and probably saved his life. Hancock tore a shirt from his body, but both his hands were seared.

What caused the fire is a mystery that has not been explained. Neither man was smoking, it was stated. Hancock thinks that the fire started from a spark when the nozzle touched the tank, but he says that the flames did not flare up until he turned on the gas.

Firemen stopped the blaze with chemicals.

TUNNEY'S WIFE MUCH IMPROVED AFTER OPERATION

Berlin, October 6.—(AP)—Mrs. Gene Tunney is speedily recovering from yesterday's appendicitis operation, according to Miss Helen Ufford, the former heavyweight champion's secretary.

"She has rallied so rapidly that even her doctor was surprised," Miss Ufford said today, adding that the former Polly Lauder was expected to leave the clinic at the end of this week.

Mrs. Tunney was said already to be able to sit up and read. Gene remained with her throughout the day with the exception of two hours this morning when he attended the funeral of the late Foreign Minister Gustav Stresemann.

TEACHING OF BIBLE IN SCHOOLS URGED BY REV. HOLMES

"As long as the teaching of the Bible is eliminated from the curriculum of the majority of the public schools, colleges and universities, and the intellectual and physical sides of the students developed and the spiritual neglected, crime and disregard for the moral and civil law will continue to increase," said Rev. B. R. Holmes, in delivering a lecture Sunday morning in Red Street Baptist church, colored, Rev. E. P. Johnson, pastor.

"No wonder crimes are being committed which are startling the civilized world, when the records show that a large percentage of the perpetrators are without the knowledge of the teaching of Bible to do right, because right is right, and not from fear of punishment," he concluded.

NEW DISTANCE RECORD CLAIMED BY AVIATORS

Coste Lands in Manchuria After Long Hop From Paris.

Paris, October 6.—(AP)—The air ministry tonight claimed a new world record for airplane distance flight in a straight line for Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte. Advice received by the ministry and the foreign office said that the aviators who left Le Bourget air field early on the morning of September 27 had landed September 29 in good condition in the vicinity of Tishihar, northwest of Harbin, Manchuria.

Unofficial estimates of the distance covered by the red Breguet seaplane, without having details of the complete route followed, ranged from 5,500 miles to nearly 6,000.

The French aviators thus appeared to have set a record at least 1,000 miles greater than that which the Italians, Arturo Ferrarin and Carlo Del Prete, established in July, 1928, by a flight of 4,475 miles from a point near Rome to a beach 10 miles north of Natal, Brazil.

The official dispatches received here this evening set at rest the fears for the safety of the fliers, which steadily had been increasing. A passenger plane had kept the ship of Coste in sight as far as Cologne, Germany, but then there came no word until a report that it had been forced to land in the eastern shore of Lake Baikal. This was somewhat north of the expected route and led to fears that the aviators had lost their way with the attendant danger of a forced landing in the Siberian wastes.

Merritt History Closed as Burial Service Is Held

The final chapter in the history of Alvin E. Merritt, whose long fight against the electric chair ended Friday with his execution at Milledgeville for criminal assault upon an Atlanta woman, was written Sunday, when funeral services were held from the Buckhead Baptist church and the body interred in West View.

Relatives of Merritt served as pallbearers. In the presence of more than 350 persons, including many relatives of Merritt, the Rev. C. C. Hinslow, pastor of the church, conducted the rites. Numerous beautiful wreaths of flowers included a large offering from Merritt's automobile plant at which Merritt had worked.

Dr. Hinslow, who baptized Merritt into the Baptist church recently, took for his text Chapter 2, Verses 1 to 3, from the First Epistle of John, the verses Dr. Hinslow read to Merritt as the condemned man sat in the electric chair, and the last words that Merritt heard on earth.

The Buckhead Baptist church quartet sang "Lead Kindly Light," and Mrs. Charles Maddox, choirmaster and assistant worker of E. C. Ray, chairman of Fulton Tower, sang a selection that Merritt showed a liking for during his stay in the Tower.

Two members of the Fulton county police directed traffic at the church during the services. Brandon and Williams, Hapeville funeral directors, were in charge of the funeral.

$20,000 IN JEWELS ARE MISSING FROM BERLIN EMBASSY

Berlin, October 6.—(AP)—Jewelry valued at $20,000 was stolen from the French embassy today when Ambassador Pierre De Margerie was attending the funeral of Dr. Gustav Stresemann.

A chauffeur found empty jewel cases in the embassy garden and detectives then discovered that a writing table in the bedroom of the ambassador had been forced open and a pearl necklace valued at $10,000, a platinum ring and stickpins had been removed. A glass cabinet in the room below was also pried open and antique gold objects taken.

It was not determined how the thieves entered the embassy, which is undergoing exterior renovations.

A BIG FIGHT IN FLORIDA.

The big circus outfit of John Ringling is moving back to its Florida winter quarters, but when it gets there it will find itself confronted with a rival menagerie and bunch of acrobats that will baffle
all competition.

For a state republican conference, headed by Chairman Calla-way, of the republican state central committee, has just endorsed the policy of holding a party statewide primary "in which only white persons may participate."

By all the gods on Mount Saint Thad Stevens and all the little fishes in the Florida waters, whether is the republic drifting? An alba pura republican primary in Florida—believe it or not! Nevertheless, that is the proposition to which the Caucasian republicans of the state have now committed themselves and into which they have invited
the "Hoover democrats" on equal footing.

It will be worth Tunney-Dempsey prize fight prices to hold a ringside seat when the party rucy comes on between the Florida lily-whites and lamp-blacks! Who will be the second in the Caucasian corner is yet to be disclosed, but we are sure that Congressman George Tinkham Holden should be rushed down from Washington to hold down the black-and-tan corner, unless in the meantime the news from Florida doesn't drive him into wild "dementia Africana." President Hoover, of course, will be the referee to count ten when the K. O. is planted and lift up the mitt of the victor!

THE RURAL CHILD'S CROSS.

There is an irony of fate in the fact that the farm work engaged in by American country children of school age seriously hinders their school attendance and decimates their chances of education. Last year there were near 1,200,000
country children between 7 and 13 years of age, who were not in school because "needed on the farm."

The federal investigators report that the average rural school term in the United States is nearly seven weeks shorter than the average city term. The report says "Many country children are lucky if they are able to go to school at all." The number usually not in school represent 12 per cent of the children of school age in their communities, which is twice the percentage of non-attendance in the cities. In the south in many cotton-growing counties the opening of school is regularly postponed to November or December to allow the children to pick the cotton. In that way the intellects of the children are sacrificed to the staple at so much per pound.

It is an imperfect and ragged educational system that allows such involuntary sacrifices to be taken from the children of the state. A typical case, given by the children's bureau, is thus stated:

"This child had been absent from school 76 days, or 60 per cent of the term. In the fall he had stayed out to pick cotton, not finishing this work until January. Their roads and weather were so bad that his parents
'just kept him home till it was so he could go.' In February he missed seven days because 'the creek was up,' and in the spring he had been ill. It is not surprising that he had not completed even the first grade."

Such cases are not exceptional.
They are painfully common and particularly so in the southern states in which there are inadequate compulsory attendance laws.

Here, then, is a vital interest of the nation.

both educational justice and economic humanity to engage the serious study and action of legislators and school authorities. To what effective end are all our efforts to increase school facilities, equalization funds and lengthen
terms, if greedy and unfeeling parents of country children are to be permitted to sacrifice the education of their sons and daughters to the profits of the farm and the truck patch?

APOTHEOSIS OF WILSON.

Speaking recently at the first convocation of the University of Florida, Dr. Hamilton Holt, president of Rollins college, said of Woodrow Wilson that he was the "man who never wrote the history of democracy, but one who made enough democracy to keep the whole tribe of historians busy for a century to come!"

That was a felicitous and faithful description of the most forward-reaching statesman America has ever produced. Only those who, like Dr. Holt, have the vision to follow into the future the splendid ideals of Woodrow Wilson, who was a veritable seer of nations, are able to approximately evaluate the service he performed in his last years to the supreme interests of the human race. It will, doubtless, take time, a long time, for historians to forge through the fogs of partisan enmity and popular misunderstanding which so meanly obscured the planetary brilliancy of Woodrow Wilson as he passed from earthly visibility. But they will yet discover him!

From his first appearance in the public field he was "gilded for service, seeking not his own" and as he marched on into the arena of world reconstruction, carrying with him the sublime American concepts of freedom and self-determination for all homogeneous peoples, he was inspired to say "now" to the old query—

"How many ages hence Shall this our lofty scene be acted over in states unborn, and accents yet unknown?"

He became the chief apostle for freed men, the godfather of new nations, and their gratitude will keep his fame secure until reason and justice in his own country shall renew his honors and reaffirm his glory.

A DESERVED REWARD.

The Fulton county commissioners did the normally expected and gracious thing when they re-elected "Uncle Henry" Wood as clerk of the board. He has been filling that important post for thirty years now and his familiarity with every detail of the county business qualifies him as no other for the onerous service the office demands.

Fulton county's population and their county affairs have grown very signally since Mr. Wood became clerk to the commissioners,
but he has grown with the office and discharged its multifarious duties with fine fidelity and veteran experience. His character and services have given him the status of a community asset, endowed him with the fullest confidence of his fellow citizens and their popular favor as a trustworthy public servant.

Fearful of safety of his money,
a St. Petersburg, Florida, man took $1,000 from the bank and hid it in his garage. Strange to say insects got $750 of it instead of gasoline and repair bills.

An Eastern attorney is being sued of which he was executor. His wealth can be attributed to working man prohibition commission, is "to probably reserve the right to use both hands.

Canada is much disquieted over the height of the proposed tariff equally perturbed about getting into Canada.

Now we are told that the ukulele originated in Sweden and for all these years we have admitted the Swedes to America with open arms.
It's quota should be tightened up.

All of us will tune in on that concert of nations and expect harmony that will resound for ages to come.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN

Good Wine

Year.

When you go through the south of France these days, either by train or motor car or on foot, it seems to you that there is a bluish haze hanging over the fields. Happy augury! For there is really no haze at all, only the illusion of one and it is caused by the density and the immense quantity of grapes that are reaching the point where they are ready to be cut. A few more weeks of beneficent warmth and they will be bottling and casking
the golden fluid everywhere, from Bearn and Gasconne to the region around Rhems known as Champagne.
It is doubtful if there will be enough vats and bottles to go around this year, the winegrowers declare. It's indeed a distressing situation. Great quantities of grapes may have to be thrown away. In other words, thousands and thousands of gallons may be lost. And an entire continent across the ocean is parching and famished for a taste. There is nothing to be done about it, though. The stuff must be drunk up immediately and on the spot, seeing there are not sufficient casks. The few thousand vats that smugglers and bootleggers might rush over to save a little in the train of to take care of the overflow. There hasn't been so much wine in sight for many years, according to the papers, and the oldest winegrowers and growers have placed an ad in some papers inviting the city folk to come and eat grapes and drink wine, without price and without money. One planter had a notice on his fence saying: "Eat all you want, even the pigs don't want any more!"

Marseille

Life.

Marseille is a city of most contrasting scenes and smells. As sanitation has not progressed to anything approving even Parisian standards, dead fish and other refuse are left in the streets. The smoke and fumes of roasting kitchens and low-roofed taverns blow about you at every turn in the quarter known as the Old Port. Some of the narrow, stair-cased alleys are hung with clothing, stretched to dry from house to house, so fattered that you wonder that the sun can get at all. Along the quays it's the pungent odor of tanneries and up the broad boulevard, the Canebiere, occasionally wafts the aroma of burning rubbish. The wondrous medley of heavily laden smells that lie in port.
More amazing than the smells of Marseille is the brilliance of its color.
Ah, the wondrous medley of colors!
That impenetrable sunlight of the Mediterranean turns even the hell of slums and factories into things of beauty. It is a music light, the "luminescence" of the market women and the vendors give an artistic display to their apples and pomegranates that is almost hypnotic. Like Giotto for instance, could he not have been pushing his canvases with delicate interest. Life is artless and sincere in Marseille, silver laughter rings out above the quarrelling of the merchants in the market place.

Call of the South.

When traveling through eastern Europe and contemplating from a railway carriage window, the unchanging scene of flat land and steppe, made doubly monotonous by an even gray sky, I felt the need of the terrible satiety that this landscape must have produced upon the peoples who dwelled there before cities came into being.
I felt the need of the terrible
satiety that this landscape must have

Sermons To Live By

BY ELAM FRANKLIN DEMPSEY.

Text: "And Jesus called a little child unto Him." 23

And Jesus is still calling the little children unto Him.

Since a number of parents have asked me to write that by and by children were making these "Sermons to Live By" into scrapbooks, it has been decided to make this sermon especially for the boys and girls.

We are told that there was once a king who had a little son and a little daughter whom he loved very much.

He wanted to make them wise and so he sent them to a country where they were to pass through many schools and learn lessons that would fit them for their father's home.

This kind father thought of them alone, but he gave to each of them servants to wait upon and care for them.

Two of these servants were to show them all the beautiful and useful things; two more were to help them hear sweet music.

Two more were carried there where they went; and poor indeed they would have been without the little servants.

Another told them all they should do to please their father and to please the king, and sang songs of praise to their father, the king.

Two of them helped them to do everything that was right and to love their father dearly and not to share with the other servants to do what would please him.

At last the loving father gave a command to each one of his children's servants, and this was what he said:

"Little Ears, look up to God;
Little Feet, walk His ways;
Little Mouth, sing His praise; Little Hands, do His will;
Little Heart, love Him still."

And now the meaning of this little story is, that God is the kind Father to every little boy and girl in the world, and that He wants them to grow up to be wise and noble men and women, loving Him with all their hearts and using all the new servants, their neighbors, and thus to do His will.

Jesus is calling unto Him each child in the world that He may bless them with His love.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL.

A Fine Volume of Facts of Evolution That Fail To Click on Man's Genesis.

For about a year now I have been pondering a large and remarkable book produced here in Atlanta. It is a religious-scientific work, serious and philosophic, compact and comprehensive, illuminating and yet inconclusive.

The reason why I have been so long studying and endeavoring to discuss the contents of this volume is the profound respect that I have for the author, Dr. Jacques, the intellectual integrity and exceptional scholarship of the distinguished author—no less a personage than Dr.
Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe university.

His volume is entitled "The New Science and the Old Religion," and it is a brave and reverent undertaking to do acceptably and incontrovertibly what many able scientists and theologians have vainly sought to do from the days of Job and Eliphaz of the land of Ram. The grand idea is to symbolize the scriptures of Genesis and substitute for its alleged fictions the modern and intricate train of physical and biological facts which constitute the "new science" of the present age. But why
"new science," when the data of it all antedates the appearance of Man upon the earth's scene? All these "scientific

THE HAWK

By ROY VICKERS

INSTALLMENT XXXVII.

A CHANCE AT ESCAPE.

Dorling told Cecil that he thought Dr. Stevens seemed a pretty decent chap.

"I think he is," Cecil said with sudden conviction. "It has just struck me. You see—this ship is a sort of rich convalescent home. Everybody's rich and everybody is just a little bit queer."

"You mean, you think it's an asylum?"

"No. They're not insane. They're just—nervy. I believe they're the well—the customers of the gang."

"Good heavens! Are they taking dope on the ship?"

"I don't think so. Except that they're silly and noisy and nervy, they don't seem to behave in any specially suspicious way. I fancy they're just recuperating."

For a time he thought over her words.

"Possibly," he said. "But I fancy there's more in it than that. We shall know soon. The captain said it was a fortnight's pleasure cruise."

But before two days had passed they knew at least one thing more about the ship.

They were pleasant days, in spite of their preoccupation. At the end of an hour they had exhausted their ingenuity in speculating on what would happen to them at the end of the cruise—with the result that they dropped the subject. There followed long, idle hours in each other's company.

It was about dawn of his fourth day on board when Dorling woke up in the sudden knowledge that the ship's engines had stopped.

Flinging on a few clothes and slipping into his overcoat he hurried to the deck—with the single thought that they must have run into port.

He was soon undeceived. In the growing light he could make out a rocky cliff—and a ledge on the cliff on which were some half a dozen very rough looking fishermen.

"By jove! The island!" he muttered aloud.

At that moment the donkey engine started and the derrick swung a load of cases from the ship to the rocky ledge.

For half an hour they unloaded cases of various sizes. The light grew rapidly. Other passengers began to drift on to the deck and presently came Cecil.

"They aren't wholly dependent on airplanes, you see," he remarked grimly. "This shows that the captain and the rest of them are in the gang."

"I'm not so sure of that," she answered. "There's something about Captain Marwood—I don't think he would ever lend himself to that kind of thing. Perhaps he believes they're really only fishermen—like the passengers."

"Several voices around them were making laughing comments on the rough clothing of the islanders—no one, apparently, suspecting that a factory lay hidden by a ledge of rock."

"All the same he'd find it jolly difficult to explain things if a warship were to turn up all of a sudden."

They waited until the loading had finished.

"Now—you see—they'll take something on board," said Dorling. Almost as he spoke bells sounded and the ship began to push off.

"There you are!" said Cecil. "Nothing was taken on board."

"If you think the captain is innocent—suppose I tell him there's a dope factory behind that rock?" he suggested.

"No. They'd simply give you more bromide—and lock you up."

Some three hours later—the island out of sight some 60 miles behind them, Dorling gripped her arm and pointed out to sea.

"Look!"

"I only see a ship."

"It's a destroyer—and it's about three hours too late. What infernal luck!"

"No good howling about it," said Cecil lightly. "Let's go and have breakfast."

It was after breakfast, some few hours after leaving the island, when Dorling was informed that the captain wished to see him.

"I'm in a very difficult position, Lord Dorling," he began gruffly. "When you were here the other night telling me a tale about your having been kidnapped, I thought you were raving. All the same, I sent a wireless to your club—and to the firm that owns this ship."

"Indeed. May I ask what my club said?"

"Nothing—said you had phoned that you were going on a voyage. The firm said much the same thing. But they seem to have made further inquiries. The long and short of it all is—difficult position for me—they've proved your story."

In sheer bewilderment Dorling explained. "There's nothing difficult in your position, Captain Marwood," he explained. "Put me off at the nearest port—and there'll be no ill feeling."

"That is my difficulty," said the captain awkwardly. "We're a little under two hundred miles from the coast of Scotland. I have specific orders by wireless not to change my course."

Dorling's pulse thudded. He was seized with an almost passionate impatience to reach harbor and rescue Cecil.

"You know you've kidnapped me—and you won't go out of your course," he said menacingly.

"That's a matter for the owners. You'll be able to bring an action against them—that is not my affair."

"You have a seaplane on board. Let me use that. I have my pilot's certificate."

Captain Marwood glanced again at the message he had received by wireless.

"Lord Dorling's story substantially true. Do not change course, but let him fly if he wishes."

"Very well," he said. "It's pretty calm now. I'll stop the ship and have her lowered. You fly at your own risk, of course."

"Naturally," agreed Dorling. "Many thanks. I'll buzz off and get ready."

On the way down from the bridge he stopped.

"There's a catch in this somewhere," he muttered. "But, by George, I'm going to risk it."

While the little airplane was being lowered by the derrick on to the calm surface of the sea, it so happened that Dorling was the subject of an animated conversation hundreds of miles away in a house in London.

Jabez Malloran, enjoying the single short cigar he permitted himself after breakfast, pleasantly occupied his mind with the task of reducing Captain Beresford to the necessary state of humility.

Beresford was scowling at his shoes while one hand twitched nervously. The silence had been a long one. Malloran removed his cigar and looked at it. It would last a few minutes longer and then it would be time to go to the office and absorb himself in his highly respectable legal practice.

CHICAGO READY FOR BIG SERIES, 50,000 STRONG

Grove Favored To Hurl Opener for Macks—McCarthy Undecided.

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.
Chicago, October 6.—The Chicago Cubs, primed to lead the National league out of the world's series wilderness in which it has been wandering somewhat aimlessly for two years, came back to the home town today in scrappy, confident mood to wind up the season, receive the welcoming cheers of 25,000 fans and prepare for the opening inter-league battle with the Philadelphia Athletics next Tuesday.

If the Cubs were annoyed by the loss of the last regular season's games to the Pirates at Wrigley field or worried in the least by the fact that the A's, even along Michigan avenue, have been installed as world's series favorites, they did not manifest it.

In the clubhouse after today's game, from the lean, taciturn Rogers Hornsby to the snarl, pug-nosed Hack Wilson and the glib Leo Hartnett, the Chicago players exhibited the cocky, rarin'-to-go sort of spirit that recalled the attitude of such victorious series clubs as the Washington Senators of 1924 and the St. Louis Cardinals of 1926 when they won the series.

To justify his assertion that he isn't "worried" about the outcome of the series, Manager Joe McCarthy came out of a showerbath to greet the eager correspondents, chat about anything they desired and satisfy their curiosity, at least partially, by declaring that his pitching choice for the opening game is narrowed down to a pair of fast ball right-handers—Charley Root and Pat Malone.

The expectation all along has been that Malone would draw the first game assignment, because of his steadiness and ability as an iron man. It was figured that McCarthy would get maximum results out of the Irishman by using him at the outset. Tonight, however, although there was no official confirmation of it, the general understanding was that McCarthy had decided definitely to lead off with Root, presumably on the theory that he has returned to his best form. In his last full game a week ago, he was "undecided."

McCarthy, however, declared: "I won't decide positively until tomorrow whether it will be Root or Malone. Right now I am on the fence. I think either can win but I expect to make a definite announcement early tomorrow."

The Cub pitcher expects George Earnshaw, strong-armed right-hander of the A's, to be Connie Mack's opening selection. Mack, however, has been pitching ideas very much under cover, indicating that he would not decide until the day of the opening game. A number of observers, including Lefty Grove to be the starting twirler for the American leaguers and there has been even the suggestion that Mack would start the game with a veteran spitballer, Jack Quinn.

To this McCarthy remarked briefly: "I hope they will start Quinn." Although they have had a number of casualties, the Cubs as a whole are in good trim for the series. Hartnett, a definite asset of the team, McCarthy announced, but this has been taken for granted right along. Zach Taylor, who hurt a finger several weeks ago, will start behind the bat in every game, barring another accident, although he may be obliged to give way for a pinch hitter at some stage of the proceedings.

GRIMM IS OKAY.

If the way Field Captain Charley Grimm performed at first base this afternoon is a criterion, he has fully recovered from his broken arm and layoff. Elwood English, shortstop, who has been out with an injured right thumb, also is ready to start. The thumb, in fact, bothers English more in handling his bat than it does in handling the ball.

"The boys are full of pepper," declared McCarthy, "and as for myself, I feel more as though a load is off my shoulders, now that the regular season is over, rather than feeling any worry about the series. To me the hardest part was winning the pennant. The series won't be as tough in some respects as has been some of our annual city battles with the White Sox. You know we get lemons and

Alabama Wishes Riggs Success

Chicago, October 6.—(AP)—Alabama, it seems, is just as solidly for the Cubs in baseball as it used to be in the political arena for Underwood—all because of the desire to back a native son, Riggs Stephenson, hard-hitting Chicago outfielder.

Manager Joe McCarthy today posted on the clubhouse bulletin board the following telegram from George H. Denny, president of the University of Alabama:

"Riggs Stephenson is an honored graduate of the University of Alabama, not only because of his outstanding baseball accomplishments but on account of his splendid character and fine record while attending this institution. At a joint meeting of the alumni council and board of trustees, a resolution was adopted unanimously extended to you and through you to strive our best wishes for success."

North Carolina offers a strong team this fall. In addition to a good set of backs their line is a good one. Here is the left side of it. At the left is Don Holt, left end and one of the good ones. In the center is Bill Koenig, a veteran tackle. At the right is Ray Farris, captain, and one of the finest guards in the conference. The Tarheel eleven is one of the biggest threats on the Yellow Jacket schedule.

Boo Monday it is called in some gridiron circles where it is considered an occasion for "I told you so's." Less fortunate commentators who rarely get a chance to chirp "Ah, ha!" with rising inflection call it the national holiday for the Association of Second Guessers.

And so to the wash tub to pluck out the Saturday's textiles and hang them on the line and see what happened.

For one thing, five of our Conference brothers skidded out of the undefeated class and joined Ole Miss in the lower berth. These were the Mississippi Aggies, Auburn, V. M. I., Maryland and South Carolina.

Of the lot, the courtly Cadets from the way made what might be considered the best showing of the consolation flight in playing Florida such a close game at Tampa.

The V. M. I. rush line, an experienced unit, slowed up the flashy Florida attacking quartet not little.

GEORGIA'S GREAT STRIDES.

No outfit in the Conference made such an improvement over the space of a week as did Georgia. Coach Mehre and his aides deserve a profound bow from every Georgia alumnus.

A week ago Georgia's green team was beaten two touchdowns to one by Oglethorpe. The latter lost to the Citadel Saturday three touchdowns to none, which may indicate that Oglethorpe was not as far along as many observers imagined.

That makes Georgia's 27-to-0 victory over Furman all the more impressive. The Bulldogs soaked up training like a sponge. The Bulldogs might not have played an inspired game, but I'll wager their coaches were inspired all last week.

JUST YOU WAIT!

and even the great stadium will not hold all the customers.

Just to remind you of a tip advanced earlier in the season—keep your eye on Johnny Branch, kid quarterback and safety man for North Carolina. Johnny probably will take the field with the varsity next Friday at The Flats.

Branch is a sawed-off shotgun, just like Stumpy Thomson, and he looks more like Stump in action than any other Conference back.

The Tarheels served notice on one and all, especially the Engineers, that they are coming here to shoot up North Avenue. If Tech can get by that game—IF Tech can get by—they can look to Florida, Tulane and Alabama with a little more confidence.

THE SLICKER.

Alabama is still up to the old tricks. The Crimson Tide looks terrible six days a week and great one day. That day always is Saturday.

In the middle of last week poor Cousin Wallace Wade had Suther, McRight, Campbell and possibly a couple of others critically ill. McRight was about to have an operation for appendicitis.

But on a Saturday McRight postponed his operation and two sophomores, Hugh Miller and Ben Smith, showed up to help Holm and Hicks drag the ball. And—Alabama licked what was said to be a dangerous, powerful team from Ole Miss in convincing fashion.

Looks like we boys would get used to that, but we always fall for it.

AUBURN DID WELL.

Auburn, plunging gamely into their murderous Conference schedule, ran into the powerful well advanced Clemson team and did well indeed.

Clemson established an early lead but in the last

HARNESS MEET STARTS TODAY

Scott Hudson To Drive in Events at Lakewood Today.

Monday, starting at 2 o'clock, will see the revival of harness races in Atlanta, and for three days at Lakewood, during the Southeastern Fair, the pacers and trotters will compete for the rich purses that are offered.

The feature event of the opening day's program will be the 2:14 stake trot worth $1,000 and will bring together such horses as Bay Rum, Volstead, which has been a big winner all over the country; Orlean Watts, which won his last four races; Lindy Tramp, another fine horse; Peter Lullwater, 2:07 1/4 record holder. There is a Crescent Limited, a Walter Chandler entry, who as a three-year-old has won five matinee races in Lexington this season and has a record of 2:10, made just last week at Lexington. Scott Hudson, famous horseman of former years, will have the reins of Crescent Limited.

The track is in excellent shape and should be lightning fast. During each heat and race King Brothers rodeo and wild west show will put on special acts in front of the grandstand and music will be furnished by Madison Garden band.

Tech Shows Strength But Is Lacking Polish

Jacket Defense on Straight Football Okay, But Air Raids Hurt Them—Power Plentiful.

By John Staton, Former Tech All-Southern End.

Power, not wholly harnessed, that is the impression the Yellow Jackets left with those who came to see them defeat the Mississippi Aggies, 27-13.

It took power of the driving, smashing kind to rack up five successive first downs for a touchdown. And yet, in the last quarter everyone was amazed to see that same Tech aggregation stand by while the Aggies passed their way to a touchdown. On this march the Aggies carried the ball exactly 80 yards, and completed six passes without a mishap, not to mention the nice runs of Pappenheimer, the individual star of the game.

From the standpoint of football technique, no more conventional game could have been played. In the first place, both teams have been so busy with the fundamentals that neither was able to crash through the line and had an opportunity to develop much deception. Secondly, it was a soggy field and a wet ball; factors not conducive to unusual offenses. So it can be truly said that the scouts who were on hand to witness the play of either Tech or the Aggies will return home with little more than a lineup and the low down on the personnel of the team.

The Aggies as a general rule used a normal line and a shifted backfield. One man in the Aggie backfield played outside the end, and about a yard back. The second man played behind the guard and tackle, about the same distance back. Directly back of this man at a distance of three yards was the third backfield player, while the fourth, usually Pappenheimer, played directly back of the center about four yards.

TECH'S WEAK SPOT. As can readily be seen, this is an excellent setup for bucks, off-tackle smashes and short end runs. And during the entire first half, the Aggies were able to crash through Tech's left guard and tackle for substantial gains.

It is also an excellent setup for fast zone or almost laterally passes. This lineup also affords the passer sufficient protection to complete a deep pass if the receiver will hustle.

Tech used an excellent defense to stop the running attack of this formation, but failed miserably to break up the passer sufficient protection to complete a deep pass if the receiver will hustle.

One of the most interesting points in the entire play was the mobility of the Tech defense. There was a time when a defensive set was rigidly adhered to, regardless. But Saturday Tech varied its defense to suit the varying conditions. With the exception of the forward pass work, the defense was excellent.

The Aggies only used one other type of attack, the conventional punt formation. More often than otherwise this was used either to kick or to place the ball in favorable punting position.

Tech used only its standard set and a simple punt formation, relying on power and precision for its drives and

Mobile Owners Ready To Toss in the Towel

Mobile, Ala., October 6.—The map of the Southern association ball clubs in 1930 may show a change. Present owners of the Mobile franchise are ready to toss in the towel. They meet here Tuesday night to decide whether they will continue to function or throw the franchise on the table of the board of directors of the league.

Poor attendance, attributed partly at least to the bad start to which the Bears got off in the race this year, caused the transfer of home games from Mobile during the closing weeks of the schedule and reports have persisted that Mobile's chances of retaining a berth in the league were more or less jeopardized.

The franchise, on the other hand, has been described as a valuable asset because of the recognition to be gained by Mobile from occupying a place in the Southern league and it is generally believed a genuine effort will be made to work out the problems confronted by the club in a way to prevent the loss of professional baseball by the city, which until this year, when the Birmingham Barons duplicated the achievement, has been the only city in the association to produce a team to defeat the Texas league champions in the All-Dixie series.

Louisiana Leaves After Mexican Win

Mexico City, October 6.—(AP)—The Louisiana college football team, which defeated the University of Mexico yesterday, left for Alexandria, La., via Laredo tonight. This afternoon the visitors made a trip by automobile to the pyramids at San Juan, Teotihuacan, about 18 miles from Mexico City.

Hysteria Mounts As Athens Faces Invasion by Yale

Bill Webster, Former Eli Captain, Scouts Bulldogs and Is Confident—Mehre Will Give Team Yale Plays Today.

By Ralph McGill.

Just five more shopping days until the Yale game!

Athenians awoke this morning, swam slowly into consciousness, swept aside the covers and leaped to the calendar to check off another day.

Restaurant men have feverish dreams, seeing a million hands reaching for sandwiches. Hotel men toss restlessly in their cubicles, dreaming of a milling throng demanding rooms that can't be had. Taxi men sleep with a contented smile, seeing the old meters registering enough to retire on.

Harry Mehre awakens with the shakes, thinking of pictures of the Yale guards and tackles who have appeared frowning on the sports pages that reach Athens. They look mean and hard as if they didn't like the photographer. Harry Mehre and his team will hear a scout's report and get down to work today on a defense against Yale plays.

The hysteria is growing at Athens. If the Yale game doesn't hurry up and come Athens will explode and go bustling off into the ethereal blue in very small pieces indeed.

The victory over Furman on Saturday added to the hysteria. Armin Waugh, who came from the obscurity of a third-string halfback's position on Thursday to a star's place on Saturday, gave the Bulldogs a threat in the backfield one of those agile-shipped young men who may take that football and go away from there at any given moment.

5,000 MORE FANS.

The Furman victory added 5,000 to the already swollen total that will witness the game on October 12 in the new Sanford stadium. The old Sanford field, where Furman was beaten Saturday, was a morose Saturday. The new field remained as dry as the bone-dry law was intended to be and rain fell for most of the game.

Temporary seats will be erected at one end of the stadium—maybe two. The total ticket demand is mounting that fast.

Bill Webster, one of the great guards of 1927 and captain of the Bulldogs, was the high-powered little wooden shed on old Sanford field Saturday and jotted down this and that in his notebook.

FOLDED UP.

At the home hotel I sat up and stood around munching popcorn for the remainder of the game.

Standing at the station late that night, waiting for the train to New Haven, I meditated a bit and said that Yale would be satisfied with three or four touchdowns.

Harry Mehre gulped politely and smiled a sickly grin there in the eerie light of the station. He was not singing in the rain. Not even a blues tune.

HAS OTHER IDEAS. He has no idea of making Yale satisfied. He hopes to make a terrible, disconcerting, very few touchdowns, much less than three or four.

Going back to town he peered at the numerals "Yale 89—Vermont 0" as painted on a drugstore window.

"You know what happened?" he asked. "The Vermont tackles and ends were so busy chasing the guy that the ball was faked to on those spin plays that they forgot all about the man who had the ball. Yale just spun and spun until Vermont's head was spinning. And then scored touchdowns after touchdowns. What we've got to do this week is to learn to grab that guy who keeps the football, or our heads will be spinning too."

YOUNG SPINNER.

Abie Booth, the 137-pound spinner, is the young man who has added most to the worries at Athens. The Bulldogs' defense seemed worried most by one of these little sawed-off runs who can slip under arms or dance through any given spot provided it is an inch wide. They stopped at the big guns that Furman had. But a little fellow named Phipkins, who didn't know much football but who could skip around with a grace and zip and go, worried the Bulldog defense to death. And Booth is a star, with the spin play as his weapon. He is as elusive as easy money.

If Georgia improves one-half as much this week as they did last week they will give Yale quite a battle. Georgia can't be figured to win the football game but Georgia thinks perhaps they can.

They had two great tackling ends in Kelly and Palmer. Their tackles learned a lot about charging. Georgia covered punts well, ends and the left tackle getting down fast. The secondary, that was so afraid of passes by the Oglethorpe game that it stood flatfooted, came in swiftly and stopped the Furman running plays.

Blocked well.

The backfield, substituted often, blocked unusually well and the entire

FIND THE TWINS

At first glance all the young ladies look alike; but you are asked to find the Twins that are clothed exactly alike. Now then: upon closer examination you will find a difference in their wearing apparel. Have they all earrings or necklaces? How about their coats and hats? Are they trimmed the same? Some have bands on the brim and crowns, others have not. Maybe the difference is just the buttonhole in the lapel of the coat.

It takes real care and cleverness to point out the difference and find the two real Twins, because two and only two are identically the same.

When you have found the twins, write the numbers in the coupon at right, fill in your name and complete address and mail at once to the Puzzle Manager, The Atlanta Constitution, Atlanta, Ga. In the event of ties in the final awarding, prizes of equal value will be given.

Think of it—you can win as much as $4,000.00 cash and a $1,500.00 Buick four-door sedan! Yes, sir! $7,540.00 in cash prizes may be won in this interesting puzzle contest plus the $1,500.00 Buick Sedan, and these prizes will be awarded after the close of the contest, November 12th, 1929.

100 Points Wins FIRST PRIZE

You will be given 90 points for finding the Twins. Immediately on receipt of your correct answer to the Twins we will send you particulars for winning the big cash prizes and the magnificent $1,500.00 Buick Sedan for promptness. No words to build—no dictionary to refer to. Everyone has an equal chance. All you will have to do then is to earn the final ten points required for the first cash prize or prizes.

Business and Trade Maintain Even Keel

New York, October 6.—(AP)—In sharp contrast to the tumbling securities markets, business and trade generally maintained an even keel last week, with retail activity somewhat greater than at this time a year ago. Conditions in heavy industries remained rather quiet, with some improvement noted.

A notable development of the week was a mild upturn in steel mill activity. U. S. Steel increased its operations from 82 to 85 per cent of capacity to 89 per cent, while the rate for the entire industry was stepped up from 82 to 85 per cent, remaining somewhat below the level of a year ago, when a vigorous acceleration after a quiet summer was under way.

The improvement was due primarily to active buying of railroad equipment, which more than offset a further decline in automotive buying. The immediate outlook, however, remained rather uncertain, with the price structure rather hazy. Further reductions in steel scrap prices were displacing developments. Farm implement manufacturing was reported as slackening its pace, reducing the requirements from that quarter. A further reduction in U. S. Steel's unfilled orders, as of the end of September, is generally expected. Pig iron production last month set a new high record for that period, but was more than 4 per cent under August.

Motors Lower.

The automobile manufacturing industry continued to lag, and motor stocks generally sought new low levels for the year on the New York Stock Exchange. Walter P. Chrysler and other leaders in the industry, however, expressed strong disagreement with the speculative attitude toward the motor shares, and remained optimistic regarding future prospects. Production during September is estimated at only 417,000 cars, as compared with 513,000 in August and 436,000 in September of last year. Much of this, however, is attributed to changes in models, and motor reports were to the effect that new models were being well received. Nash reported earnings for its third quarter of only half that of the like period a year ago, but the management pointed out that plants were almost completely shut down for six weeks during model changes, and that the new cars were in good demand. The somewhat smaller agricultural purchasing power than was earlier indicated, and public losses in the collapse of the stock market, however, may affect sales.

Cotton Prices Erratic During Week's Trading

New Orleans, October 6.—(AP)—While the cotton market has experienced some periods of activity during the past week, it has been a general thing quiet with price fluctuations rather erratic though at times broad enough. Starting at the low point of 18.42 for December, prices worked upward during the early part of the week, stimulated by fears that the tropical storm which struck the Gulf coast near Pensacola and then moved northeastward throughout the eastern cotton states might further damage the crop in that section.

At the highest point reached for December, 18.80, prices showed gains of fully a dollar and a half a bale. As fair weather followed in the wake of the storm, the market eased off moderately in the second half of the week on a more hopeful view as to the damage done in the eastern belt and owing to increased activity reported in picking and ginning in the central and western portions of the belt which warranted expectations of a heavy movement of cotton to market.

The advance in the early part of the week was held in check and the reaction later on was increased by effect to the elimination of interest paid on debt to be retired through this financing and an adjustment of officers' compensation, averaged $376,572 a year, equivalent to 2.12 times preferred dividend requirements and $1.12 a share on the common stock, after preferred dividend requirements. The stock is convertible at any time into common on a share-for-share basis.

The balance sheet as of June 30, 1929, adjusted to give effect to this financing, showed total net assets, deducting stock, all liabilities and reserves, of $4,598,118. This is equivalent to over $15 a share for cumulative preferred stock and current assets of $4,850,652 are 9.6 times current liabilities.

Operating Haverty Furniture Companies existing 18 stores located in 17 principal cities throughout 8 southern states. The stock is being offered at $23.50 a share by Hambleton & Company and Citizens & Southern Company. The Haverty business was established at Atlanta, Ga., in 1885 as a single store with total sales of $6,000 in the first year. Additional stores have been opened from time to time and the business has had a steady growth until gross sales are now around $6,000,000 a year. In each year of their history the stores as a group have made a profit. Operating largely on the installment payment plan, the companies have 65,000 accounts on their books.

Net earnings for the three years ended June 30, 1929, adjusted to give effect to this financing, showed total net assets, deducting stock, all liabilities and reserves, of $4,598,118. This is equivalent to over $15 a share for cumulative preferred stock and current assets of $4,850,652 are 9.6 times current liabilities.

HAVERTY STOCK OFFERED PUBLIC

New York, October 6.—(AP)—One of the most violent declines on record, followed by a brisk but only partial recovery, took place on the New York curb exchange this week. Trading in the stock market was fairly active, as scores of issues broke 20 to 100 points below their recent high levels, on a volume of trading that frequently delayed a ticker from 30 minutes to one hour.

While the selling movement was widely regarded as a necessary correction of a top-heavy speculative position, it received its chief impetus from the announcement of record-breaking increases in brokers' loans.

The violence of the decline uncovered hundreds on stop-loss orders, and forced the liquidation of many weak speculative accounts. Short selling also accelerated the decline.

Public utilities, many of which have been selling on a yield basis of less than 3 per cent, were among the hardest hit, but most of them snapped back in impressive fashion when selling pressure was lifted on Saturday. Electric Bonds & Shares, which recently touched a new high record at 189, sold down to 141 on Friday but rallied to 152 3/4 on Saturday. Electric Investors rallied from a low of 221 on Friday to 242 on Saturday, but closed 3 points below the high of that day. American Light & Traction yielded over 50 points.

Oil displayed fairly good resistance to selling pressure as a result of the recent decline in crude oil production. Aviation shares disclosed several points of weakness as a result of speculative disappointment over the current year's sales. Shares of recently formed investment trust ran into a storm of liquidation on the theory that their holdings had substantially depreciated in market value in the recent setback, but the heads of one of these trusts announced that 94 per cent of its assets were still in cash, indicating that little stock had been bought at the recent high levels.

Curb officials announced that ticker service was extended to several of the leading southern and southwestern cities next week, and indicated that a further expansion to the Florida coast resorts was likely for the winter season.

PACKING.

The common stocks of companies engaged in meat packing have in general failed to share in the big bull movement in the market, which has been going on with only relatively short interruptions since 1921.

The reasons are varied. One of the most important has probably been the growth of smaller independents closer to the source of supply. Some of the larger chain stores have also set up packing plants of their own and are in serious competition in retail distribution.

In the last few years serious losses have been caused by the reduced purchasing power of European labor, which has not been able to buy the usual quantities of our pork products, thus throwing the surplus back on the home market.

We are also a period of reduced supplies of beef cattle with consequent high prices and reduced turnover.

Efforts are being made to overcome these handicaps. The big packers are pleading for removal of the restriction preventing them from engaging in various sidelines, and progress is being made with improved methods of chilling and packing of meat so as to reduce the cost of distribution and get the product into the hands of the ultimate consumer in a home attractive appearance.

For the time being there does not seem reason to expect a quick change in the outlook for packing companies in general. The industry, however, is pleading for removal of the restriction preventing them from engaging in various sidelines, and progress is being made with improved methods of chilling and packing of meat so as to reduce the cost of distribution and get the product into the hands of the ultimate consumer in a home attractive appearance.

ties and treasures, which are excellent barometers of sentiment, shaded off but only a few issues attracted any attention. In general, the chief characteristic of the market is still its thinness, with the familiar wide fluctuations on small turnovers of good bonds which normally move in very conservative fashion.

New offerings last week totaled $50,823,000, of which $30,000,000 was the Canadian National Railways 5 per cent 40-year loan 98 1-2. The aggregate of new bond financing in the preceding week was $23,373,000 and in the corresponding period a year ago, $86,713,000.

MONEY TIGHTNESS INJURES STOCKS

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, October 6.—A year ago, at this time, one of the ablest bankers in Wall Street, a financier of the old school, was quoted in this column as saying in a private talk with your correspondent that, in his opinion, "the money market has gone to the mat with the stock market." Despite the new factors in the existing situation, what sooner or later is going to happen is what has always happened. The money market has gone to the mat with the stock market.

From the viewpoint of many people in and out of Wall Street this old-fashioned banker did not realize that times had changed; that we were living in a new era; that old rules should be scrapped. It is only within the last few days that bankers of the old school have received a respectful hearing.

It was only a week ago last Saturday that President Mitchell, of the National City bank, sailing for abroad, stated that the general trade situation and outlook was good; that brokers' loans were not too high; that there was no need to worry over the credit situation and outlook. This week's monthly analysis put out by the National City bank admits that a short-lived mild business recession is ahead, adding:

"Tightness of money continues the principal handicap which business must surmount. Since this is a product to a large extent of the speculation in securities, a temporary slackening of the business pace which would have as its effect a sobering influence on speculative sentiment should be the very thing needed to keep business on a sound and enduring basis."

Bootleg Money. While the money market went to the mat with the stock market a year ago, the money market has been slow in getting a strangle hold on the stock market because of the rapid and widespread development of the new so-called bootleg money market. Figures now available for trading on the New York Stock Exchange for the month just ended show the turnover in stocks for September at a new high for the month at 100,056,000 shares. For the nine months the turnover is $27,000,000, a new high which compares with the new high of 613,000,000 shares for the first nine months of last year, with 96,000,000 shares for the first nine months of 1918, the last year of the war. For the single month of September this year the turnover was larger than for any other month of the year. Since the unprecedented bull stock market started in 1921, there has been a steady increase in the volume of trading. For the first nine months of 1921 the turnover was 125,000,000 shares. For the first nine months of 1924, the year the bull stock market became pronounced, an abundance of easy money, the turnover was 170,000,000 shares against the 827,000,000 just reported.

The steady increase in trading on the New York Stock Exchange and on other exchanges here and elsewhere made it possible for corporations to raise all and more working capital beyond the record of the year. During the bull stock market corporations increasingly have been more independent than ever before. For the first nine months of 1924, the year the bull stock market became pronounced, an abundance of easy money, the turnover was 170,000,000 shares against the 827,000,000 just reported.

Until very recently, the stock market has ignored high money rates. The high money rates have been eased only by increasingly satisfactory earnings of corporations. Recently, however, it has become increasingly evident that high money rates have been having a cumulative unfavorable influence on general trade. The building trade is more dependent than any other basic industry on time money. It has been evident all of this year that the building trade has been slowed down by high money. Industry as a whole, however, reported high record earnings for the first half of this year. But recently, signs have multiplied that the slowing down in the building trade has had unfavorable influence on general trade. Industry with the slowing down in those two lines in time influencing the steel trade. Now, as the National City bank's statement for September indicates, the slowing down because of the handicap of tight money.

To close observers, it has been apparent for many months that it would only be a question of time until high money would slow down general trade with the stock market, in turn, suffering. The figures now at hand for new financing for the month just closed, are merely a repetition of those made public every month this year. For September, foreign financing here totaled a mere $5,000,000 against $101,000,000 for September of 1928. For the nine months of this year, the total is only $275,000,000 against $2,311,000,000 for the first nine months of 1928.

High money is responsible for this slowing down in foreign financing in this market. Due to high money, there would have an unfavorable influence on our foreign trade which, in turn, would be felt in our domestic trade.

The statement of September financing at hand shows real estate financing for the month at $9,087,000, including $6,632,000 stock, against $28,225,000 for September of 1928, with the total for the nine months at $249,000,000 against $428,000,000 for the first nine months of 1928.

Financing for the nine months by financial companies, mostly investment trusts, totals $2,065,000,000 against $647,000,000 for the first nine months of last year, including $1,537,000,000 stock against $402,000,000 for the first nine months of 1928. Of this total, $4,005,000,000 is stock against $2,350,000,000 for the first nine months of 1928.

The total income of the state for 1929-30 will be slightly more than 3,000,000,000 rubles. A striking feature of the new budget is the great growth in revenue from non-taxable sources such as railroads, industries, state trade, etc., which increased by 56 per cent.

The history of the United States for the decade ending with 1929 for the decade ending with 1929, but both reason and precedent disclose the folly of any such assumption.

Brokers' loans as reported by the New York federal reserve bank last week set a new high record for the seventh week in succession. During that period the average increase has exceeded $120,000,000 a week. The New York Stock Exchange reports that its members' borrowings rose $608,000,000 during September.

Of the time that will be required for the liquidation and reorganization of the companies that are now in financial straits, no one can speak positively. It has taken two years or more to assemble the capital in the billions of dollars that constitute what are now called brokers' loans. It may take as long to liquidate these loans as it took to assemble them. In any event the process is not likely to be an exhilarating one, nor is it probable that it will provoke fresh enthusiasm in the capital market.

Therefore, over-enthusiastic stock markets are not to be expected, but serious trouble is not anticipated, and the circulation of depressing rumors, no one can speak positively. It may take as long to liquidate these loans as it took to assemble them. Quite naturally, the high rates for money have restricted building, but the restriction is not likely to be alluded to in this review, and it should cause no apprehension.

The cotton goods trade is showing distinct signs of improvement, and the market for raw cotton has evinced a susceptibility to bullish influences that is refreshingly new.

The price level for grain seems to be pretty high, but the price of being without difficulty, and the moral support of the federal farm board is helping, despite the disagreement of the cotton crop.

Of course, it will come very slowly, but as the stock market liquidates itself, money ought to grow easier, and the money market should move with less friction.

The politico-economic news from abroad is unimpressive. The world awaits the result of the conference between President Hoover and Premier MacDonald. It is hoped and believed that the conference will be an augury of permanent peace for the world and all the blessings which should follow in its train.

was disappointing in view of the price movements.

Lead was steady and the demand was said to be largely routine. Estimates were that consumers' requirements were taken care of for the immediate future.

The zinc market was steady. About the only feature was the move to curtail ore production with reports that 75 per cent of the tri-state mines were to shut down for a week.

Antimony was staidier at the end of the week, rallying from an easy position. Firmer far eastern markets were responsible for the improvement.

THE BEASTS OF TARZAN No. 43

At length they reached the spot where Rokoff had pitched his camp. Here they found all in turmoil. While he was absent many of his men had deserted, taking away the bulk of his food and ammunition. When he had done venting his rage on those who remained, he returned to where Jane stood, guarded by two white sailors. She struggled and fought to free herself as the men laughed at her efforts.

Rokoff grasped her roughly and started to drag her toward his tent. Then he struck her and carried her, half conscious, within. His boy had lighted the Russian's lamp and at a word from his master he disappeared. Jane had sunk to the floor in the middle of the enclosure. But slowly her numbed senses were returning to her and she was commencing to think very fast indeed.

Now Rokoff was lifting her to her feet and attempting to drag her with him. At his belt hung a heavy revolver. Jane's eyes riveted themselves upon it. She made believe she had fainted, but through her half closed lids she waited her opportunity. It came just as Rokoff was raising her. A noise at the tent door caused him to turn his head an instant.

That instant was his undoing. The butt of the gun was not an inch from Jane's head. With a single, lightning-like move she snatched the weapon from his holster. At the same time Rokoff realized his peril. But it was too late. Jane held the gun firmly in her hand, its muzzle pointed at the Russian's heart, her finger upon the trigger. Yet even in her peril she dared not fire the shot!
